The visual image has been an important vehicle for communication in many societies, and in today's culture it increasingly displaces words and texts. In the Department of the History of Art and Architecture, students receive training in the critical analysis of images and monuments that have come to be defined as the monumental arts of painting, sculpture, and architecture, and of those objects and monuments which have conventionally fallen outside this monumental arts tradition, e.g., photography, mass media, popular culture, and their equivalents in non-western and pre-modern cultures and eras. As students learn to look, read, and write critically, they are introduced to the ways in which the arts and images of the past and present shape an individual sense of self and cultural identity. The history of image and monument making is a history of cultural interconnectedness between sacred and secular, elite and popular, dominant and marginal.

The standard major will provide students with knowledge of the historical and geographic breadth of art’s history and enable the development of critical skills central to the discipline. An intensive track is highly recommended for students who consider History of Art and Architecture their primary or only major. Majors are encouraged to gain professional experience through internships in local art museums and organizations. The department also offers minors in Museum Studies and Preservation and students are encouraged to consider these curricular options to develop more professionalized skills. The Museum Studies minor capitalizes on our partnerships with the Carnegie Museums of Pittsburgh and other local institutions and enables students to work directly on an exhibition in our University Art Gallery. The Preservation minor is offered to students who are interested in a more specialized focus on the preservation and documentation of historic architecture and the built environment.
