Revised: 09/2019

The Department of East Asian Languages and Literatures offers courses in the language, literature, film, linguistics, and culture of China and Japan; the department offers both a major and a minor in Japanese. A full sequence of courses in the modern standard language of Japan and a variety of offerings, ranging from introductory to specialized, illuminate various facets of Japanese civilization. Students whose interests range broadly across the civilization of East Asia may want to take advantage of the Asian Studies certificate program. The departmental curriculum for the Japanese major is composed of three main categories as follows.

Courses designed to develop competence in the four skills of the Japanese language, plus courses for advanced study.
Courses taught in English and focused on the mainstream of Japanese culture as reflected in literature, drama, and film.
Courses for the advanced study of literature and linguistic analysis.

Required courses for the Japanese major

Capstone course
JPNS 1999 Capstone Project (three credits) must be taken during the student’s last term as an undergraduate.

Non-departmental course requirements
Students must complete three courses related to Japan offered by other Dietrich School of Arts and Sciences departments. Two of these courses must have at least 50% Japan-related content. The Asian Studies Center at the University Center for International Studies (UCIS) maintains a list of Asia-related classes, which students may use to identify Japan-related courses.

Grade requirements
A minimum GPA of 2.0 in departmental courses is required for graduation.

Satisfactory/No Credit option
First year language courses may be taken on an S/NC basis; second year courses may not be taken on an S/NC basis. In the third and fourth years, majors have the option of taking two additional courses on an S/NC basis, one of which may be an advanced language course.

Writing (W) requirement
Students must complete JPNS 1908 Directed Writing (one credit) in conjunction with one of the courses marked with an asterisk (*) in the culture, literature, and linguistics section.
