Revised: 10/2018

Overview

Korean is a language spoken natively by the 74 million Korean people living in the Korean peninsula, including 26 million North Koreans and 48 million South Koreans. It is spoken as a heritage language by 5.3 million people in the United States, almost three-quarters of a million in Japan, and half a million in the former Soviet Union. People study Korean as a foreign language worldwide because of Korea's continuing economic success since the 1970s. Korean ranks as the eleventh most spoken language among over 6,000 languages that exist on the globe.

In order to respond to the diverse needs of its students and to equip them with the practical language skills, the Korean Language and Culture Program offers courses on Korean language, linguistics, culture, literature, and film. Korean language is offered at four proficiency levels, emphasizing all the four language modalities of speaking, reading, writing, and listening.

The East Asian Languages and Literatures Department offers a minor degree in Korean. The Korean minor is designed to recognize a serious commitment to the study of Korean language and culture. It is especially suited for undergraduate students who wish to augment their major program with a knowledge of the Korean language.

The minor offers students two options for completion. The first three years of language courses are 4-credit courses; the rest of the courses are 3-credit courses.

Option 1

This option is intended for students who have little or no previous experience with the Korean language. Students must take four Korean language courses from the Language course list, totaling 14 to 16 credits, and one course from the Culture, Film, Linguistics, or Literature course list. Completion of this option requires 17 to 19 credits.

Option 2

This option is designed for heritage learners. Students must take two second, third, or fourth year language courses from the Language course list, totaling 6 to 8 credits, and two courses from the Culture, Film, Linguistics, or Literature course list. Completion of this option requires 12 to 14 credits.
